EQUALITY OF SEX (2)

To understand the concepts of equality is a social value and the constant search for social justice in order to ensure that all people have the same dignified and egalitarian living and working conditions without there being a difference because Social extract, sex or sex.

GENERO is the designation of what is considered typical of women or men and is attributed as socio-cultural harm to some and others. Not generally coincident in time or in cultures and varies continuously ".

The equality of women is the outstanding issue of the century. In all ages and in the world, there are some cases of abuse that have received millions of women of all races, cultures, religions and social classes, events that continue to this day in many countries , Which are defined as civilized.

There is no doubt that progress has been made worldwide in achieving gender equality through the Millennium Development Goals (including equal access of girls to boy's Primary education); however, women and girls continue to face discrimination and violence throughout the world.

Gender equality is not only a basic human right, but the foundation for a peaceful, prosperous and sustainable world.

If women and girls equality is assured in access to education, health care, decent work and representation in political and economic decision-making, sustainable economies will boost and companies benefit And humanity as a whole.

We must recover our roots, the essence of the individual, which makes the person precious.

It is something innate to the person who lives with someone to help you, accompany, take care, talk to him and finally, forms the family with him. A human being cannot be different from another according to gender.

Partnerships are needed with exemplary people.

People should be mirrors in which politicians are put to act for the good of these. Only regeneration and rectification projects can enable the society to activate challenges more in line with the situation of the person.

Inequalities between men and women are deeply rooted in society. Women are poorly represented in governments, parliaments and business boards. Nor do they have access to decent work, face and suffer professional segregation by gender differences. Sometimes they are also denied access to basic education and health services and in all parts of the world are victims of violence and discrimination. Gender equality benefits society as a whole.

Ending all forms of discrimination against women and girls; Eliminate violence against women in the public and private sectors, including trafficking and all forms of exploitation, and eliminate harmful practices such as child marriage, early and forced marriages and female genital mutilation. Objectives that must be set immediately.

Recent estimates indicate that 35% of women have experienced physical or sexual abuse by their partners or others throughout their lives. In the case of the Americas, the percentage is over 36%.

Today, there is still a third of countries that have not yet achieved parity in primary education, and many of them have a surprising number of girls facing violence and sexual harassment in schools And on their way to them.

Extremist groups are also observed suggest watching girls go to school for energy generation education to awaken social, cultural, economic and political change.

Other stated objectives relate to the recognition and evaluation of unpaid care and domestic work and the full and effective participation of women in public political and economic decision-making. An area in which progress has been made in Latin America and the Caribbean.

A woman is added a situation not easy and that is to reconcile two worlds. On the one hand its role as mother and wife and another of their aspirations and professional achievements. It can be caused conflict not only for the physical and mental effort involved but the effects by placing themselves in a situation of dilemma with regard to their being and making it feminine.

It is vital to achieve gender equality and women do not restrict access to the field of production, labor force or the commercial domain.

RECOMMENDATIONS

- Improving the use of technology, particularly information and communication to promote the empowerment of women, and ensuring universal access to sexual and reproductive health and rights Targets included in the Sustainable Development Program.
- We must fight and change attitudes that perpetuate the attitudes, beliefs and practices that generate cultural inequalities.
- Focus on finding ways to break the deadlock and accelerate progress on gender equality, both in society and within parliaments, which have only 22% of parliamentarians around the world.
- It is necessary to eliminate the so-called invisible economy of unpaid work from household tasks, which stops all economies and societies through the creation of more just societies and new sectors of employment, Closer to the formulation of new economic policies.
- Sustainable development needs greater investment in gender equality.
- It is absolutely necessary to free children and women from discrimination that are mired in many societies so that they can take advantage of their abilities.
- Recommend the inclusion of a gender perspective in all national policies (legislation, policies, and programs).
